A RED SEA ADVENTURE.

Some time ago the news was given that the French transport Averyon, from Tonaquin with soldiers, went ashore at Cape Guadafui in the Red Sea. Particulars reaching New York lately show that there were over 600 men and women on board, and the natives—the Soulis—would not let them land. After keeping the strangers off the strand for some time, and being themselves kept off the ship with difficulty by forty-five marines, the only armed force on board, a leader of the tribe came alongside the steamer and named $600 as the price of permission to land. That was as much money as there was on board ship altogether, so that the offer could not be accepted; but after much bartering it was agreed that the first officer and eleven men could go ashore. They took with them a mortar and life line, which they very nearly lost in the surf, the boat having capsized with the loss of one of the men. A line was thrown and fastened to the transport, but the natives became demonstrative and threatened to cut it if any attempted to come ashore. The natives were constantly making efforts to reach the ship, and badly frightened the women. In a few hours the German steamer Masallia came along and was able to take off about half of the passengers, the first selection being from the women and invalids by lot. After that steamer went off another attempt was made to land, but resisted successfully by the natives. In the afternoon of the second day the steamer Lord of the Isles appeared and took on board all the men and as much baggage as possible. The natives were nearly frantic with rage, and the lieutenant and ten men on shore were obliged to fight their way through to get to the life line. The lieutenant, who was the last man to leave, had all the brass buttons torn off his coat in a tug of war between those on board trying to pull him up and the natives to pull him back. It was only after a desperate struggle that the former prevailed. Before leaving the Averyon the captain set fire to her, and as the Lord of the Isles steamed away those on board could see the black bodies of the Soulis darting hither and thither through the flames. First officer Evans of the rescuing steamer said that "so intent were they on securing what they could from the ship that they did not seem to mind the flames at all. As we were passing out of sight we heard a terrific explosion, and saw timber and niggers flying about in the air. Poor fellows! They forgot 60 pounds of powder which was stored on the grounded vessel, and when the flames struck the explosive a good many of their souls went to kingdom come."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

A fruit journal gives the following receipt for a simple insecticide, which may prove useful to many of our readers: Boil the leaves and stems of tomato plants until the juice is all extracted, and apply the liquor to growing plants. It is said to be deadly to caterpillars, lice and many other enemies of vegetation, while it does not injure the growth, and leaves an odor for a long time to disgust insect marauders.

Some time ago we gave a news item about an invention of Mr. Edwards, of Los Angeles, for burning crude petroleum as fuel for boilers. Lately the new fuel was given a week's trial at Mr. Claus Spreckel's sugar refinery, San Francisco, when, according to a Los Angeles paper, it was demonstrated that the works could be run cheaper with oil than with coal. As that refinery uses twenty-two steam boilers, of 120 horse power each, and has thirty drying kilns in constant operation, a test of the invention upon a larger scale could hardly be required.

The Saturday Press repeats the untruth of its correspondent "American," that the editor of this paper had sneered at things American. We did work off an ancient joke on one thing American, in a reference to the Guide's account of the mock election which was confined to the writer of that account, and was only designed to pay him off for dragging in the "Canadian editor" for the third or fourth time in a few weeks. The discussion of the American flag on the hotel—we do not mind telling them—was conducted on our side by an American citizen who took counsel with other American citizens before writing. The paragraphs passed editorial review as containing the "well-taken point that the Hawaiian flag should fly over Hawaiian property. We are glad the discussion has forced our contemporary to disclaim having tried to array one class of the population against another. The fact is that he and his correspondents have repeatedly sneered at the nationality of the editor of the BULLETIN, unaware, perhaps, that a large proportion of the business, professional and mechanical classes of this Kingdom are Canadians. As to personal allusions to the editor of the Press, we acknowledge the corn, but, as he himself wrote a justification of that kind of thing in connection with his tilt with the late editor of the Advertiser, it seemed to be as good a way as any to retort upon some of his acridulated humor at our expense. Finally, in reference to taking the Guide up for a violation of the proprieties in one of its paragraphs yesterday, it should be only necessary to remind our contemporary that he was the first to dig up the hatchet, and he can just take what he gets until he chooses to bury it again. If he was too proud to notify his contemporaries that the abominable allusion referred to had been inserted without his knowledge, or during a temporary departure of his judgment, it was both justifiable and a duty to hold him to account for the offence.

KING'S PICTURE SHOP.

A visit to the picture and picture-framing shop of Messrs. King Bros., on King street, is well worth making. It was particularly so when the writer dropped in the other day, and met as the most prominent sight the pictures of King Kamehameha III. and Queen Kuluana, painted by Stanley in 1849 and restored by Hasselman this year. They appear to fine advantage in a heavy gilt frame, and are destined for the walls of the Foreign Department. There is a large variety of pictures on sale, including domestic art as well as imported, comprising oil paintings, raised work, engravings, plaques and panels. A pretty cluster of mangoes, executed by Mrs. King, was on exhibition but had just been bought by Mr. Samuel Parker. Artists' materials of all kinds, stereoscopes and views, and pictures of celebrities, of various styles, are also always in stock. A special line of goods of a very artistic class is the ebony ware, in stands, brackets, etc., and there are pole cornices in walnut and ebony, together with mirrors in variety, and people desirous of making elegant additions to their house furnishings will find it to their advantage to call and see for themselves. Anything in the way of picture framing the establishment is prepared to do, keeping on hand and replenishing by every steamer a full stock of framing material, in gold, oaks, and other woods. Among other specimens of work in this line they do a large business in framing society diplomas, giving them an elegant setting that makes them more like works of art than ever. They use the latest machinery in their workshop, which produces the most accurate joints possible. Of such is a patent mitring vise, adjustable to any size of frame, a mitring plane, and a scroll saw adapted to the finest work. They make a specialty of furnishing plaque frames to order, mounting panels on plush, and making velvet and combination frames. This is one of the most essential of industries in a refined community, and the Messrs. King are conducting it in a manner to ensure complete satisfaction to customers in all respects.
